Abstract

The Igbo live in the southeast of Nigeria and constitute a sizable population of the country. There is the need therefore to develop the language spoken by the people to a large extent through the creation of terms. This is the contribution of this work. Particularly, the work designs and presents a total of one hundred and seventy English political terms and other expressions in Igbo. Different methods of term creation as proposed by (Dubuc 1978) have been used. That is, some of terms have been created basically by explanation, composition techniques, adaptation, and naturalization. It is believed that this work will be immensely beneficial to the broadcast media, and schools in teaching and learning civics and social studies.

Introduction

Political terminology deals with political terms. Most of the existing Igbo political terms are of English origin and that is why an attempt is being made to add to the existing works already done by bodies like SPILC (The society for promoting Igbo language and culture), the National language centre (NLC) and others who have tried through their several publications to meet the terminological demands of the Igbo language.

It is worthy of note that term creation "did not start today, it started as far back as Plato around 428- 347 BC. For many years linguists, lexicographers, encyclopaedists, and terminologists have carried out researches into the system and methods of naming things. In the 8th century, the system of naming things was known as nomenclature (Rev, 1979: 6:7). In the 19th century in France, the system of naming things came to be called terminology. This word terminology was derived from the word term. The word term has been defined by Petit Robert dictionary as:

A unit of denomination belonging to a terminology. A group of words or expressions chosen to convey message ... A word belonging to a specialized vocabulary and which is not of common usage e.g. technical term, philosophical term, legal term etc.

Deductively from the above, terminology is the study and the use of terms.

Methodology

English political terms used here have been collected from newspapers, magazines and political science textbooks. A total of one hundred and sixty seven were collected. Different methods of term creation as proposed by (Dubuc 1978) were used. Some terms were created by explanation, composition techniques, adaptation, naturalization etc. In addition to the methods, the writer consulted many relevant texts, some colleagues in field of term creation, reporters and news broadcasters in the Igbo language at the Anambra Broadcasting Service (ABS). More importantly, she tried as much as possible to strictly adhere to the systems of writing the Igbo language, e.g.: commission, komishon.

The need for creation of political terms in Igbo

Terms are special registers made for a particular field of study. A term must be a noun or of the nominal group (Dubuc 1978). Terms are created to satisfy the needs of people in order to communicate from one language to another. According to Dubuc (1978), there are two methods of term creation viz-direct and indirect methods! Direct method is divided into two: namely derivation and composition. Under derivation we have the following: normal derivation, regressive derivation, derivation by prefixation and derivation by interfix. Under composition we have joining prefix to word, joining two or more full meaning words, back formation, abbreviation, acronyms, sigla and hybridization. Indirect formation of terms includes semantic extension, change of grammatical category and loaning of words. These are further divided into sub categories numerous to mention. These methods are applied in this work in order to achieve the best results.

There is the need for political terms that exist in English to be translated into the Igbo language because the Igbo language is under the process of development. Also in the day to day running of affairs like in the media houses, there is always the need for the translators to translate these English political terms into their appropriate Igbo equivalents in order to bring home their ideas, especially now that we are in a democratic dispensation.

In fact, the political terms in Igbo would serve to bridge the awareness gap between the educated and the uneducated. Moreover, since these English political terms are foreign and have foreign culture embedded in them the need to create the equivalent political terms in Igbo becomes imperative as a means of solving the cultural and linguistic problems inherent in the use of the English terms. Ezeuko (2005) captures this, 'the purpose of reaching out to the generality of the people through translation in Nigerian languages especially in Igbo language is to remove the cobwebs surrounding the full understanding of these foreign concepts.'

Creation of Igbo political terminology

In the table below, we present the English political terms and their Igbo translation. For ease in reference, the items have been numbered and arranged alphabetically using only the initial letters. We showed the translation method adopted for each listed item. For example, item 163, "vote" is translated as vootu, and the translation method is naturalization.

Conclusion

This work has presented the translation of a number of political terms from English into Igbo. As stated, the writer has adopted some of translation techniques such as naturalization, definition, structure claque, explanation or paraphrase. The work serves as our modest contribution to the development of the Igbo language.
